PUBLIC SERVICE LOAN FORGIVENESS

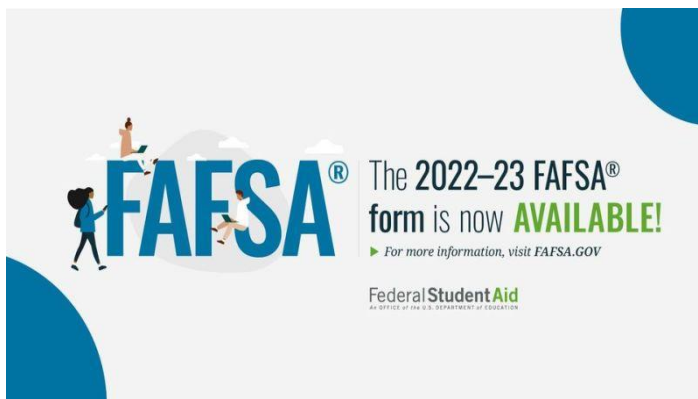

100,000 borrowers are eligible under new rules

The Department of Education this week announced that it has identified 100,000 borrowers who are eligible for student debt cancellation after changes made to the Public Service Loan Forgiveness (PSLF) program in October. Currently the program promises to wipe away loan debt after a public service worker makes 10 years of monthly payments (120 consecutive payments). It no longer matters what kind of federal student loan a borrower has or what repayment plan the borrow has been enrolled in. There is currently a limited-time waiver that allows borrowers to count payments from any federal-loan program or repayment plan towards loan forgiveness.

Borrowers now have until October 31, 2022 to see if they qualify under the new waiver.

For more information and to see if you qualify for loan forgiveness please visit www.studentaid.gov/manage-loans/forgiveness-cancellation/public-service.

May your college memories last as long as your student loan payments.
